

Basic Detail Report

A woman walks down the street pushing a child in a pram; the wall behind her is plastered with protest posters attacking the police for its provocation and violence that led to the death of one of their activists

Date

1969-1979

Medium

gelatin silver print

Description

During the 'years of led' police violence against political demonstrators became endemic. The protest posters on the street walls in this image attack the police for a recent event where the law enforcers provoked political activists with guns and molotov bombs and killed one of the local Communist leaders.
