

Basic Detail Report

High school students from Liceo

Castelnuovo in Rome march in a rally against nuclear energy and against the reform of the school system

Date

1972-1972

Medium

resin coated gelatin silver print

Description

Liceo Guido Castelnuovo was a high school in Rome, that was at the forefront of student demonstrations from the 1960's-70's. It had a largely left-wing population of students and teachers, and was experimenting with more progressive teaching methods, which were discouraged or repressed by the conservative government. In January 1972 the students and teachers went on strike together and protested alongside unionised workers at a large rally.

Dimensions

Overall: 18.1 x 24.3 cm (7 1/8 x 9 4/8 in.)