Description

The Italian Women's Movement 1968-1978. In the atmosphere of worker's strikes and protests in the late 1960s, the women active within the Italian Communist Party (PCI), most significantly those of the UDI (Unione delle Donne, the PCI women's flanking organization), continued their identification as workers and fought for equal rights with men in the public sphere. The Italian Communist Party (PCI) was a communist political party in Italy.
