Description

Mario Monti, is an Italian economist who served as the Prime Minister of Italy from 2011 to 2013, leading a government of technocrats in the wake of the Italian debt crisis. Monti studied at the private Leo XIII High School and attended Bocconi University of Milan, where he obtained a degree in economics in 1965. Later, he won a scholarship to Yale University where he studied under James Tobin, a recipient of the Nobel Prize in Economics. Monti began his academic career at the University of Trento, before moving to teach economics at the University of Turin from 1970 to 1985, and finally to Bocconi University, where he was appointed Rector in 1989, and President in 1994. Carlo Scognamiglio is a teacher, economist and parliamentarian. He was chairman of the Senate of the Republic of 1994 to 1996, during the XI th legislature of the Italian Parliament. Enrolled at the Faculty of Economics from the Bocconi University of Milan, Scognamiglio Pasini graduated and worked there in 1968 as assistant professor in economics. After specializing in the London School of Economics, he was appointed professor at the Bocconi and professor at the University of Padua in 1978, while continuing his work at the Bocconi, in which he meets Mario Monti.
