Description

Adone Zoli (1887-1960) was a DC politician who became Prime Minister in 1957. His mandate began during a time of crisis and division in the Italian government, and lasted only over a year; in 1958 he resigned, as the internal division between parties made his majority too fragile. The President of the Republic at the time was Giovanni Gronchi, pictured here with Minister for Industry Antonio Gava.
